

Working with Free-Flowing Students

Orazbaeva Gulparshin Amankeldievna

Teacher of the Faculty of Pedagogy and Psychology of the Nukus State Pedagogical Institute

Abstract: In the process of educational work, the head of the class should study the whole class team. The head of the class determines a lot of information about the children by accepting the class assigned to him. This information is obtained from the child's family, teachers, friends, and the unit of influence on education is created on this basis.

Key word: methodology, education, free master, child psychology.

The individual character of the child affects his behavior, mastery, relationships and his place in the team. For this reason, it is not appropriate to forget the individual student while educating individuals in the team. Because the head of the class determines who to rely on, who to assign tasks to, who to give independence to, and who to regularly help in organizing many organizational tasks, only because of his good knowledge of their individual characteristics. Therefore, individual attitude gives the opportunity to find the most effective way of educational influence on the child. In the process of educational work, the head of the class should study the whole class team. The head of the class determines a lot of information about the children by accepting the class assigned to him. This information is obtained from the child's family, teachers, friends, and the unit of influence on education is created on this basis.

The head of the class can focus on teaching some aspects of the student's behavior at different stages of educational work. In order to achieve comprehensive education of the student, it is necessary to plan the program well in advance, prepare a plan for teaching students, interview questions, essay topics. According to Navoi, sometimes one person is unable to educate one child, and the teacher organizes several children-class teams and teaches science and manners. In this process, the head of the class faces many difficulties. Therefore, students should feel that they are indebted to the teacher for life. - As the head of the class educates students morally and spiritually, he must comply with the following requirements in his activities:

- the head of the class should not treat the child based on the position and wealth of the student's parents.
- the head of the class should teach moral norms to the children.
- vices such as arrogance, greed, and ignorance are qualities alien to the teacher's morals.
- teachers, who are considered scientists in the eyes of the people, must be able to refrain from bad deeds and corruption.

It is a difficult and delicate task for the head of the class to be able to deal with parents properly. Because most of today's parents are people with secondary or higher education, they learn a lot of pedagogical information through newspapers, television, and radio. There are also situations when a boy or a girl behaves arbitrarily at school, but is attentive and listens to what is said in the family, or vice versa. In the family, he behaves rudely and arbitrarily, but at school he behaves politely and disciplined. What is the reason for this? It is impossible to find the same reason and the right answer for all such cases. Because its reasons can be different in each case. So, even if the goals of the class leader and parents are the same, their cooperation, mutual understanding, and dealings will not be without contradictions.

The activity of the head of the class is aimed at forming the personality of a person who is maturing. The results of this activity are reflected in the appearance of the student, his personality traits, character and behavior. If there is no clear and clear understanding of what the pedagogue is striving for, there will be no earnest effort to improve the personality of the students, rather the work carried out in education will have a random tone and will be carried out only to fill the time allotted for it. Without clearly knowing the goals of educational activities and taking these goals into account, there is no and cannot be a full valuable education. The purpose of spiritual and moral education depends on the requirements of the society, and these requirements, in turn, are the level of development of the productive forces and the work of teaching and educating young people in the society is all about the formation of moral ethics and faith in the young generation, and their It should serve to educate in the spirit of unlimited loyalty to the motherland.

The head of the class solves educational issues not alone, but in cooperation with other students who teach in these classes. The cooperation of the head of the class and other teachers working in the same class in educational work, the implementation of a single demand for students and the mutual support of students to each other increases the quality of education.

If the class leader is a gardener, each of the students is a different flower. Just as each flower requires special care, each student also requires attention to himself. If the student is neglected, then it becomes like a flower without care, or it grows in the direction it wants and does not spread beauty.

References:

1. Temirbekova, A. (2021). THEORETICAL ASPECTS OF INNOVATION PROCESSES. Internauka, (5-2), 94-95.
2. Kaikavus. "Nightmare". - Tashkent. Teacher, 1986.
3. Norov, I., & Uldawlet, D. (2021). Psychological mechanisms that increase the effectiveness of the educational process.